Nowadays knowing a foreign language is becoming an integral part pf higher, secondary education, as well as professional fields, because experts in various fields have high-level cooperation with foreign partners. Therefore, their demand for language teaching and learning is high. Knowledge of foreign languages is becoming very important in modern society. Because the introduction of complex teaching methods and modern technologies into the field of education system has increased the demand for teaching and learning.

By the end of the 20th century, a number of changes were introduced bu experts in the fields of higher and secondary education, as well as the vocational education system.

Innovative ideas for news promotion were developed. According to him, in addition to the mother tongue, learning one of the foreign languages has become one of the urgent issues of modern society. In order to promote this idea in the field of the educational system in a wide and popular way, methods of teaching foreign languages in simple and complex ways have been developed. Accordingly, according to the scientists, the term " methods " has 2 main meanings:

- It means a certain way to the goal and achieving a result.
- A complete methodological system and the main intellectual direction of the educational process that prevailed in different periods of the development of science.

The modern stage is characterized by careful selection of foreign language teaching methods. These days, special attention is paid to modern information technologies and current trends. Teaching methods of foreign languages, included in the fields of the educational system were widely promoted in institutions of higher education. Accordingly, in order to further develop innovative methods in collaboration with teachers and students, popular methods were used.

These methods effectively use the resources of information technologies, unlike the traditional teaching system. The basic concepts of this methodology are artificial intelligence, telecommunications and information media.

Another main aspect is the use of high - level grammatical tools. Traditional style grammatical tools are important with the simplicity and fluency of the language, the grammatical aspect of the newly promoted methodology, high - level structure, new ideas and terms written in scientific style.

If we approach these methods from a conversational point of view, the fluency of speech is crucial for representatives of every field. To improve the fluency of speech, high - level grammatical structures and popular style terms and terms are important.

Educational methods developed in order to widely promote new innovative ideas of teaching foreign languages included in the fields of higher and secondary education system have been effective. Information technologies, high-level grammatical structure and fluency of speech, which are part of the methods, will be useful in their place.
